Early in her career, Judith learned a valuable lesson about business, about success and about life: the more you give of yourself, the more you achieve. This has been especially true for Judith in serving women, her chosen market. Judith has developed a solid reputation as a financial advisor whose first interest is in her clients, not their portfolios. This was reflected in recently being chosen by the Orleans Chamber of Commerce as both the Businessperson of the Year and the Professional Advisor of the Year.

Often quoted in the media, Judith enjoys educating women about investing and financial planning. She has presented several times at the You Deserve It Conference and The National Women's Show and speaks regularly upon invitation.

A member of the Community Caring Club for the Orleans-Cumberland Community Resource Centre and a team leader for the Weekend to End Breast Cancer, she also volunteered for an array of women's events this year.

On the professional side, Judith is a committee Vice-chair and Past Chair of the national conference for Advocis, the oldest and largest voluntary professional membership association of financial advisors in Canada. She is also the Chair of the Orleans Chamber of Commerce and President of the Women's Business Connection. Until recently, Judith sat on the Advisory Board of Women Moving Forward.

Judith lives in Ottawa with her husband, Ian, and 12-year-old son, Sam. When she isn't quilting or picking the banjo, she is enjoying family time at their cottage at Lac Ste. Marie.
