My life has been a journey from early on in life when I came to Canada as a refugee from Vietnam in 1975 after the end of the war. Certainly there were many ‘bumps’ along the road as I had to learn French, and then English, in order to thrive in my chosen profession as an engineer. My education has led me to the path I have pursued as a professional in indoor air quality. My life has particularly been exciting to me since I started my own environmental consulting firm in 1995, and have been successful for the last fourteen years providing quality expert service to my clients. In that time, I have learned to believe in perseverance in face of adversity, and to always have personal integrity, foremost, in all of my work. I also believe in living my life to the fullest, and in sharing the precious moments of my life with my family. These, to me, are the keys to the successful journey that my life has been to date.
